The town church, but first built in 1696, Alverstoke St Marys having previously served. There were enlargements in 1734 and Circa 1835, with a restoration in 1887 by Sir Arthur Blomfield, who designed the detached campanile tower (1889). The exterior is a red brick basilica of Italianate style, emphasised by the tower. Inside the aisles are separated from the nave by the Ionic columns of the original building, which gives to the interior a typical late C17 appearance.
